Doctor Ayers Pitches His Last Game Here To-Day

SAY GOOD-BY TO AYERS TO-DAY

Doctor Yancey Wyatt Ayers will pitch his last game for the Richmond team this afternoon. He will officiate in the last game of the double-header against Portsmouth, after which he will get his railroad tick and travel to his new home up with Clark Griffith and the Washington Nationals.

It is going to be something of a holiday, this getaway performance of the mountain Goliath. He will receive from his reammates a dress suit case, and from the owners of the club he will get a traveling bag fully equipped with all of those things that make traveling more pleasant. There will be a little speech-making and some adieus offered. This will all happen immediately before the second game.

No question exists but that Ayers is popular in Richmond, and his popularity will be attested by the throng this afternoon. He has done good work for the local club. Not a patron of the game but will wish the big fellow all manner of success in his new home, and very few but believe that he will soon be one of the main attractions in the big show.

because his boss failed to get relief to the front soon enough Richmond lost a ball game, 4 to 3; a ball game that looked so securely stowed away in the local strong box that no odds offered were taken.

It didn't happen until the eighth inning, and then Lee Garvin, who manages ball clubs for a living and plays first base as a pastime, likewise interpolates various degrees of comedy to keep the crowd warm, spilled something about a yell that his club has been collaborating upon for several weeks. When the "yell" stuff was pulled you could see those fellows take in another notch in their

Be it known that Harry Griffin came into that eighth inning with the count registered three to one in favor of his side. There is always more or less satisfaction in realizing that your side, is in front, and Harry was pitching that the property fair baseball until then pretty fair baseball until then.

But Harry has devolved a propensity for blowing along about the sixth or seventh inning. Yesterday he postocted his collapse until the eighth, which simply prolonged the agony of those who had come to the conclusion that Richmond would gain a lap on Roanoke—Roanoke, by the score board, being in for a beating at the hands of Newport News. Apparently realizing that his lapse had brought him nearly to the close of the game, Friend Harry began to make ye for leaf than Harry began to make up for lost time.

Mr. Dye pitched a very good ball game, excusing a certain amount of wildness, during which he managed to hit Bresnahan, Lusky and Strain when Bresnahan was hit—in the fifth inning, denoting time, not place—it resulted in one run and paved the way for another. Connie stole second and Charlie Strain came through with a nice biff, after which Bill Laval hit by Garvin for three bases. This brought Good Sports Onered.

Stanton biff, after which Bill Laval hit by Garvin for three bases. This brought the two runs. Laval was caught at home when Dye ousguessed Sentz on the hit-and-run and wasted the bail. Laval never had a chance, and was blocked off the plate by three feet.

Seven Costly Errors Made by Roanoke.

Roanoke, Va., September 5 .- Roanoke played poorly, allowing Newport News to get a lead in the first three innings which the locals could never overcome. Tolson was wild, and was relieved by Ferryman, who pitched fine ball, but his miserable support allowed the visitors three runs. Barton was very effective, and only in the seventh were the locals able to hit him effectively. The seven errors Roanoke made helped in the scoring. The score: Ronnoke.

Boehling started the first game, and got away in great shape with the game until the ninth inning. Not a run was scored off Southpaw Joe until this frame, and had it not been for an error by Laporte, Joe would have finished the contest. With three on in the ninth and none out, Zeider shot a hopper at Laporte, who booted the ball away, Hartzell scoring. Then Joe walked Sweeney, making the score 3 to Petersburg, Va., September 5.—If there was any doubt regarding the pennant of 1913 it was dispelled this afternoon, when the Goobers beat the Tars 3 to 2. The game was a pitchers' lattle between Richmond and Weeder, and, although the Tars made four more hits than the Goobers, they were kept so well scattered that they counted for naught. Richmond had his bad inning in the second, when singles by Vanuntil Henry had retired Gilhooley. Then Johnson fanned Maisel on three pitch-ed balls.

IN THE WAKE OF THE GAME

BY GUS MALBERT.

It is getting vastly too late in the season, and Roanoke is winning too consistently for the Colts, if they are really cincere in wanting to land in second place, to let ball games slip through their fingers as that one was idled away yesterday. There were many contributing causes to the defeat. but the chief reason was Harry Griffin. If ever a pitcher can be justly accused of losing his own game, Griffin is the man. He fairly outdid himself until the eighth inning, and was given grand assistance by the team. They had scored three runs and were fielding faultlessly. Then Harry weakened; he not only weakened, but he went after bunts in a manner which does no credit to his experience.

Steve Griffin might have yanked him earlier, or at least when he appeared in trouble, but since the opposition was not hitting him, Manager Steve probably felt that he could take a chance. Harry seems unable to go the whole way. He has lost several ball games recently in the closing rounds, after pitching championship ball for six or seven boxes. They got to him in Petersburg in the seventh inning and tied the game after Richmond had four runs. Doc Ayers had to come to the rescue, and the game went thirteen innings to no decision. Garvin was luckier yesterday, and his four runs won.

Doc Newton went after Dye's knock in that eighth in rather funny shape. We are loth to criticize a player of Doc's ability and hustling qualities, but it did look as if he might have nailed that drive. Instead of going after it with both hands, he stuck-his gloved fin to the ground, and the sphere went rolling between his legs. Had he retired Dye, the first man up, the story might have been different. But that's neither here nor there. They got to Harry Griffin, and they beat him.

Willie Smith, from Baltimore, is here; but Sanborn, another pitcher, has not arrived. Walter Smallwood blew into the city and helped out Harry Griffin. He looks much improved, and certainly delivered when he was needed. They hit him once, for a double, but no damage resulted. It is possible that he will get a chance in the first game to-day. If it isn't Smallwood, it will be Ray, the portpaw from Carolina.

Young Klien, who was pressed into service by Garvin, is a member of the Battle Axe team. He played centre, and while he had only one chance, he showed that he is ready now for professional baseball.
